Final Exam Answer Key

U.S. Currency Training Module

For more information and resources,
go to uscurrency.gov.

Security Features

1. This note may be:

Counterfeit currency

This note does not have the correct watermark for a genuine $100 note.

To review the security features for the $100 note, go to slide 26 of the training module.

Security Features

2. This note may be:

Genuine U.S. currency

The ink on the numeral in the lower right-hand corner should change from green to black on the 1996 style note.

To review the security features for the 1996 style $20 note, go to slide 49 of the training module.

1996 Style $20 Note Color Shift

Security Features

3. This note may be:

- Genuine U.S. currency

  The security thread in the $50 note glows yellow when exposed to UV light and reads USA 50.

  To review the security features for the 1996 style $20 note, go to slide 49 of the training module.

Security Features

4. This note may be:

- Genuine U.S. currency

  The $2 note has a portrait of President Thomas Jefferson on the front.

  To review the design of the $2 note, go to slide 5 of the training module.

Security Features

5. This note may be:

- Counterfeit currency

  This note does not have the correct watermark for a genuine $50 note.

  To review the security features for the $50 note, go to slide 38 of the training module.

Quick Ways to Authenticate

6. This note may be:

- Counterfeit currency

  Microprinting should look clear and easy to read.

  To review microprinting, go to slide 52 of the training module.

Security Features

7. This note may be:

- Counterfeit currency

The 3-D security ribbon contains images of bells and *100*s that move when you tilt the note.

To review the security features for the $100 note, go to slide 24 of the training module.

Overview

8. This note may be:

- Genuine U.S. currency

The $50 note has a portrait of President Grant on the front. Remember, portraits are not security features. You should check to see if the note has a watermark, color-shifting ink, and a security thread.

To review the security features for the $50 note, go to slide 37 of the training module.

Security Features

9. This note may be:

Counterfeit currency

The $100 note has a security thread located to the left of the portrait of Benjamin Franklin. On both the 1996 and 2004 style $100 note, the security thread reads USA 100 when held to light.

To review the security features for the $100 note, go to slide 24 of the training module.

Security Features

10. This note may be:

- Genuine U.S. currency

The $20 note has a watermark of President Jackson located to the right of the portrait.

To review the security features for the 1996 style $20 note, go to slide 47 of the training module.

Congratulations

You have completed all sections and the final exam of the U.S. Currency Training Module.

For more information and resources, go to uscurrency.gov.